THE REINICKER LECTURES.

The course of Reinicker lectures delivered at the Episcopal Theological Seminary near this city during this week by the Rt. Rev. Joseph B. Cheshire, D. D., of North Carolina, was of unusual interest. The subject of the lectures, as already announced in the Gazette, was the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Confederate States. The first lecture dealt with the relation of the southern dioceses to the Confederacy. The Episcopal church felt that at the time of the Revolution, the severance of the Confederate States from the United States, and the establishment of an independent government involved the independence of the church as an organization, and as the several states seceded the Episcopal bishops and clergy took measures, as soon as possible, for the organization of the Episcopal church in the Confederate States. The leading bishops at that time were Bishops Atkinson, of North Carolina; Elliott, of Georgia; Davis, of South Carolina, and Polk, of Louisiana; Bishop Meade, of Virginia, being too infirm by reason of age to take any active part in the preliminary conference, and his death occurring in March, 1862. The only General Council of the church was held in 1862, and at that meeting important business was accomplished. The legislation was important, especially in its wide outlook and suggestions with reference to problems which have come before the united church in later years. The provincial system was advocated and approved and a change of name was suggested for the church from Protestant Episcopal to "Reformed Catholic." This motion did not pass, though advocated with great ability by Bishop Atkinson. The only change made in the prayer book was in the prayer for the president of the United States, changed, of course, to the president of the Confederate States in the morning and evening services. The United States was not changed elsewhere, for example in the form of prayers to be used at sea. The fleet of the United States was still retained in the special prayer. The pastoral letter issued by the General Council was noted for its noble dignity, its spiritual power and its Christian charity. There was not one harsh expression used against the government of the United States or the questions involved in the civil war. Bishop Cheshire touched all hearts in recounting the last interview of General Lee with Bishop Meade as the latter lay on his deathbed, and in one of the noblest passages in the lecture he indicated the course of Bishop Polk, "the warrior Bishop of Louisiana," in taking up arms for his country. The care of the Episcopal Church in the Confederate States for the religious life of the army was eloquently depicted in Bishop Cheshire's last lecture. Among the many heroes and self-denying chaplains, Rev. Mr. Quintard, afterwards bishop of Tennessee, occupied an honored place.

These lectures are a valuable contribution to the religious history of the Confederacy, and many will be glad to know that Bishop Cheshire expects to publish them with additional chapters at an early date. All who heard them expressed their high appreciation of the course.

A DELIGHTFUL RECEPTION.

Last night the members and friends of the Second Presbyterian church were tendered a most enjoyable reception by the Westminster League. The lecture room was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and autumn leaves. The guests were welcomed by Mr. W. H. Melchior, president of the league, and spent some time in social intercourse. The first number on the informal programme was a solo by Mr. Kenneth Ogden. Then Mrs. David Graham rendered a selection on the piano. After this Miss Lucy Graves sang, and Mrs. A. T. Hanson of Washington recited. Mrs. Hanson was formerly a member of the Second Church and was given a hearty welcome by her many friends. The entire evening was greatly enjoyed by the large number present.

DEATH OF MRS. FENDALL MARBURY.

Mrs. Sally Clagett Marbury, 75 years old, for many years a resident of Croombs, Prince George's county, Md., died at the home of her son, Dr. Charles C. Marbury, in Washington, last night of diabetes. Mrs. Marbury had been in failing health for a number of years, but her ailment was not considered dangerous at this time.

Mrs. Marbury was the widow of Fendall Marbury, and was well known in this city. She resided with her son Charles, a physician, in Washington. She leaves three sons—Charles C. Marbury, of Washington, William L. Marbury, the Baltimore attorney, and Marshall Marbury, of Upper Marlboro, Md.

CARRYING CONCEALED WEAPONS.

Frank Butcher and Ray Berry were arrested last night by Special Officer Hotoway, charged with trespassing in the Potomac park, and carrying concealed weapons. They had the additional charge of carrying concealed weapons. The weapons were found in the trunk of a car. The prisoners were brought to the station house in this city and were today turned over to the authorities of Alexandria county.

DR. STRICKLER TO PREACH TO-MORROW.

The coming of Dr. G. B. Strickler to this city is an event of unusual interest. His position among theologians is unique, he being both a deep thinker and a clear and lucid speaker. He has the gift of making the darkest truth clear and simple. He will doubtless be heard by large congregations at the 11 and 7:30 o'clock services at the Second Presbyterian Church tomorrow.

COOL WEATHER.

The weather was cold last night, and at an early hour this morning the mercury in this thermometer was near the forty mark. Frost was visible and in some places thin ice formed. The weather bureau announces rising temperature by tomorrow.

PROPOSED NEW FERRY.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for re-establishing the ferry service between Alexandria and Washington report that a boat will in all probability be placed upon the line sometime during the first half of the month of December.

KILLED BY AN ENGINE.

About half past seven o'clock last night John Sutpin, track foreman of the Southern Railway, discovered the body of a man on the north track of that road about a quarter of a mile west of Seminary station, near this city. The body was taken to W. H. Demaine & Son's undertaking establishment in this city. The unfortunate man appeared to be about 50 years old. He wore a grey suit of clothes, a celluloid collar 15½ inches, a four-in-hand necktie and a black derby hat. A sawset was found in one of his pockets, a butt gauge, a rule, two penknives, a five cent piece, and a broken whisky bottle containing the label of an Alexandria saloonkeeper, but no papers by which the deceased could be identified.

Justice George C. Stuart, of Fairfax county, was notified and he ordered a jury to be summoned for ten o'clock this morning. Mr. Windsor Demaine acted as foreman.

Chief Goods suggested that the remains were those of John T. Redd, who was arrested recently on the charge of stealing tools at Rosemont, and who had a few days ago finished serving a term in the Alexandria county jail.

The county courthouse was called over the telephone and the surmise of Chief Goods was shown to be correct, as Redd had recently been liberated and had been seen in this neighborhood Thursday. The clothes worn by the dead man were identical with those in which Redd was attired when he left the county jail.

It was stated by one of the witnesses that one of the crew of a north bound R. F. & P. train had reported that he saw an engine strike a man on the Southern Railway track about 7 o'clock last night.

The jury later returned the following verdict: "We the jury, find that the aforesaid John T. Redd came to his death by being struck by a northbound Southern Railway engine on the evening of October 28, 1910, about 7 o'clock, and that there are no indications of foul play."

THE WATER SUPPLY.

During the recent drought, as is usual at such times, a vegetable substance known as alginate, formed along the water course and in the water company's reservoirs and of course found its way into the city mains. Some complaint was made at the office of the company, and though the officers knew that the water had not been made deleterious, yet on Monday they requested a druggist of the city to send a sample of the water to Richmond for analysis. Today the following reply was received:

Laboratory of Dr. WILLIAM H. TAYLOR, Richmond, Va., Oct. 28, 1910.

The Alexandria Water Company: Gentlemen: I enclose the results of my sanitary examination of the sample of water received from you. The albuminoid ammonia is rather high, a condition due to some slight admixture of vegetable matter. The water is markedly opalescent, which causes it to appear somewhat unsightly, but which does not impair its sanitary qualities. The sample is not a bad water, but it is not quite as good as several others I have examined for you.

Very truly yours,
Wm. H. Taylor, Chemist.

Accompanying the letter is a tabulated analysis of the water with this note: "These results indicate that this sample is a satisfactory drinking water."

Cadets and officers have been the center of a round of gaiety since arriving in the capital, and enjoyed themselves.
